Next Play Theatre Company
Presents

L8R MTL

Written by Joe Hamilton and Directed by Jay Ferguson

Living now for four years in Toronto, playwright Joe Hamilton has finally written about his two cities. Montreal is presented as a vibrant, sexually liberated metropolis and home to Pierre and Melanie, a young professional couple who have married to curb their enthusiasms. They are moving to Toronto, a city they suspect will be inhospitable to their lifestyle and to their first language (although the characters are French, the play is presented in English). Complicating matters is Genevieve, a sexual dynamo with a strong interest in at least one of them, who insinuates herself into the virtual and real lives of the couple.

With a light comic touch, L8R MTL (Later Montreal) tells the dramatic story of three people living in an on-line world where new identities are created in an instant and location might be nothing more than where your browser is pointing.

Next Play Theatre Company's previous production, What They Don't Know, presented at the Summerworks Festival, was described as "Pinteresque" by Now Magazine's Jon Kaplan and was enjoyed by audiences for its suspense and Kafkaesque flavour. L8R MTL removes the Kafka and adds the hot sauce.
